v.

DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL,
Respondent

Administrative Law Judge at the Dept. Hearing: Ronald M. Gruen

Appeals Board Hearing: June 1, 2006
Los Angeles, CA

ISSUED JULY 26, 2006

7-Eleven, Inc., Shu J. Wang, and Shun L. Wang, doing business as 7-Eleven #2133-22150 (appellants), appeal from a decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control¹ which suspended their license for seven days for their clerk Chia Yung Wang, having sold a six-pack of Budweiser beer to Cyndie Navarro, an 18-year-old police minor decoy, a violation of Business and Professions Code section 25658, subdivision (a).

Appearances on appeal include appellants 7-Eleven, Inc., Shu J. Wang, and Shun L. Wang, appearing through their counsel, Ralph B. Saltsman, Stephen W. Solomon, and Ryan M. Kroll, and the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, appearing through its counsel, David B. Wainstein.

¹The decision of the Department, dated July 14, 2005, is set forth in the appendix.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellants' off-sale beer and wine license was issued on November 13, 1990. Thereafter, the Department instituted an accusation against appellants charging the sale of an alcoholic beverage to a minor on November 30, 2004.

An administrative hearing was held on May 18, 2005, at which time oral and documentary evidence was received. Subsequent to the hearing, the Department issued its decision which determined that the charge of the accusation had been established, and appellants had failed to prove an affirmative defense.

Appellants thereafter filed a timely appeal in which they raise the following issues: (1) the decoy operation was not conducted in a manner which promoted fairness; (2) appellants were denied discovery; (3) appellants were denied due process; and (4) the decoy lacked the appearance required by Rule 141(b)(2).²

DISCUSSION

I

Appellants contend that the decoy operation was not conducted in a manner which promoted fairness. They argue that the clerk's sight of the gun of one of the undercover police officers, exposed at the officer's hip, so frightened and distracted him that he forgot to ask the decoy for identification.

The Appeals Board is not the finder of fact. That was the job of the administrative law judge (ALJ) who presided over the administrative hearing, and who made factual findings that were supported by evidence which compels the rejection of appellants' claim.

The ALJ is also the judge of credibility (Lorimore v. State Personnel Board (1965) 232 Cal.App.2d 183, 189 [42 Cal.Rptr. 640]; Brice v. Dept. of Alcoholic Bev. Control (1957) 153 Cal.App.2d 315, 323 [314 P.2d 807]), and he made an express finding that the clerk's testimony about the gun was not credible (Finding of Fact 7):

Clerk Wang testified and his testimony is inherently unbelievable and is riddled with contradictions and conflicts with respect to the testimony of other witnesses at the hearing including his mother, co-respondent Shu Wang. His testimony that he observed a stranger loitering at a magazine rack near the sales counter with a gun exposed at the hip, put him in fear of his safety during the transaction, is undeserving of belief.

The individual he observed was indeed an undercover police detective monitoring the minor decoy operation, and based on the evidence in the record the detective was not wearing a gun on his hip, and if he were, it would be blocked from view by a long over-jacket the detective was wearing at the time. Other areas of the clerk's testimony were also inconsistent with the evidence and suggest recent fabrication.

There is support in the record for the ALJ's findings. There is appellants' acknowledgment (App. Br., p. 5) of an officer's testimony that the clerk admitted the decoy "didn't look old enough," but made the sale because he was sleepy, as well as the testimony of the officer in question that he was wearing his gun in an ankle holster and not at his waist.

We have reviewed the clerk's testimony and that of the police officer, and are satisfied that the ALJ's findings are supported by the evidence.

II

Appellants assert in their brief that their pre-hearing motion seeking discovery of all decisions certified by the Department over a four-year period "where there is therein a finding or an effective determination that the decoy at issue therein did not display the appearance which could generally be expected of a person under 21 years of age under the actual circumstances presented to the seller of alcoholic beverages at the time of the alleged offense,” was improperly denied. Appellants allege that ALJ Gruen, who heard the motion, denied it because he concluded it would cause the Department an undue burden and consumption of time and because appellants failed to show that the requested items were relevant or would lead to admissible evidence.

Appellants spend much of their brief arguing that the provisions of the Civil Discovery Act (Code Civ. Proc., §§ 2016-2036) apply to administrative proceedings, a contention this Board rejected in numerous cases in 1999 and 2000 (see, e.g., The Southland Corporation/Rogers (2000) AB-7030a), all of which were argued by the same law firm representing the present appellants. Those decisions of the Appeals Board held:

“[T]he exclusive right to and method of discovery as to any proceeding governed by [the APA]” is provided in §11507.6. (Gov. Code, §11507.5.) The plain meaning of this is that any right to discovery that appellants may have in an administrative proceeding before the Department must fall within the list of specific items found in Government Code §11507.6, not in the Civil Discovery Act. . . . [¶] In addition, §11507.7 requires that a motion to compel discovery pursuant to §11507.6 “shall state . . . the reason or reasons why the matter is discoverable under that section” [Emphasis added.] [¶] Therefore, we believe that appellants are limited in their discovery request to those items that they can show fall clearly within the provisions of §11507.6.

Appellants’ arguments in the present appeal, repeating, almost verbatim, the arguments made in 1999 and 2000, are no more persuasive today than they were six or seven years ago.

Appellants argue they are entitled to the materials sought because they will help them “prepare its [sic] defense by knowing . . . what factors have been considered by the Department in deciding how a decoy’s appearance violated the rule” (App. Br. at p.14) so that they can compare the appearance of the decoy who purchased alcohol at their premises with the "characteristics, features and factors which have been shown in the past to be inconsistent with the general expectations . . . of the rule." (App. Br. at p. 13.) They assert "it is more than reasonable" that decisions in which decoys were found not to comply with rule 141(b)(2) "could assist the ALJ in this case by comparison." (Ibid.) However, appellants do not explain how an ALJ is expected to make such a comparison.

It is conceivable that each decoy found not to display the appearance required by the rule had some particular indicium, or combination of indicia, of age that warranted his or her disqualification. We have considerable doubt, however, that any such indicia, which an ALJ would only be able to examine from a photograph or written description, would be of any assistance in assessing the appearance of a different decoy who is present at an administrative hearing.

The most important indicium at the time of the sale is probably the decoy's facial countenance, since that is the feature that confronts the clerk more than any other. Yet, it is, in every case, an ALJ's overall assessment of a decoy's appearance that matters, not simply a focus on some narrow aspect of a decoy's appearance.

We know from our own experience that appellants' attorneys represent well over half of all appellants before this Board. We would think, therefore, that the vast bulk of the information appellants seek is already in the possession of their attorneys, a fact of which the Board can take official notice. This, coupled with the questionable assistance the information sought could provide to an ALJ in assessing the appearance of a decoy present at the hearing,³ persuades us that ALJ Gruen did not abuse his discretion in denying appellants' motion.

III

Appellants assert the Department violated their right to procedural due process when the attorney representing the Department at the hearing before the ALJ provided a document called a Report of Hearing (the report) to the Department's decision maker (or the decision maker's advisor) after the hearing, but before the Department issued its decision. Appellants also filed a Motion to Augment Record (the motion), requesting that the report provided to the Department's decision maker be made part of the record. The Appeals Board discussed these issues at some length, and reversed the Department's decisions, in three appeals in which the appellants filed motions and alleged due process violations virtually identical to the motions and issues raised in the present case: Quintanar (AB-8099), KV Mart (AB-8121), and Kim (AB-8148), all issued in August 2004 (referred to in this decision collectively as "Quintanar" or "the Quintanar cases").⁴

The Board held that the Department violated due process by not separating and

⁴ The Department filed petitions for review with the Second District Court of Appeal in each of these cases. The cases were consolidated and the court affirmed the Board's decisions. In response to the Department's petition for rehearing, the court modified its opinion and denied rehearing. The cases are now pending in the California Supreme Court and, pursuant to Rule of Court 976, are not citable. (Dept. of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 615, review granted July 13, 2005, S133331.)

screening the prosecuting attorneys from any Department attorney, such as the chief counsel, who acted as the decision maker or advisor to the decision maker. A specific instance of the due process violation occurs when the Department's prosecuting attorney acts as an advisor to the Department's decision maker by providing the report before the Department's decision is made.

The Board's decision that a due process violation occurred was based primarily on appellate court decisions in Howitt v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 1575 [5 Cal.Rptr.2d 196] (Howitt) and Nightlife Partners, Ltd. v. City of Beverly Hills (2003) 108 Cal.App.4th 81 [133 Cal.Rptr.2d 234], which held that overlapping, or "conflating," the roles of advocate and decision maker violates due process by depriving a litigant of his or her right to an objective and unbiased decision maker, or at the very least, creating "the substantial risk that the advice given to the decision maker, 'perhaps unconsciously' . . . will be skewed." (Howitt, supra, at p. 1585.)

Although the legal issue in the present appeal is the same as that in the Quintanar cases, there is a factual difference that we believe requires a different result. In each of the three cases involved in Quintanar, the ALJ had submitted a proposed decision to the Department that dismissed the accusation. In each case, the Department rejected the ALJ's proposed decision and issued its own decision with new findings and determinations, imposing suspensions in all three cases. In the present appeal, however, the Department adopted the proposed decision of the ALJ in its entirety, without additions or changes.

Where, as here, there has been no change in the proposed decision of the ALJ, we cannot say, without more, that there has been a violation of due process. Any communication between the advocate and the advisor or the decision maker after the hearing did not affect the due process accorded appellants at the hearing. Appellants have not alleged that the proposed decision of the ALJ, which the Department adopted as its own, was affected by any post-hearing occurrence. If the ALJ was an impartial adjudicator (and appellants have not argued to the contrary), and it was the ALJ's decision alone that determined whether the accusation would be sustained and what discipline, if any, should be imposed upon appellants, it appears to us that appellants received the process that was due them in this administrative proceeding. Under these circumstances, and with the potential of an inordinate number of cases in which this due process argument could possibly be asserted, this Board cannot expand the holding in Quintanar beyond its own factual situation.

Under the circumstances of this case and our disposition of the due process issue raised, appellants are not entitled to augmentation of the record. With no change in the ALJ's proposed decision upon its adoption by the Department, we see no relevant purpose that would be served by the production of any post-hearing document. Appellants' motion is denied.
